Monthly Comment

A solid earnings delivery with material buyback announcements, combined with continued optimism on the impact of the AI driven capex boom helped push the European market higher in February. Macro developments in Europe were better than expected, confirming the view that economic momentum is slowly improving. ELEVA Euroland Selection was up 4.64% vs an index up 3.27%, an outperformance of 137 bps.

Our cyclical bias had a good contribution in February. Sector allocation had a positive impact, thanks to the overweight in consumer discretionary, the underweight in consumer staples, and the underweight in real estate. Conversely, the materials and financials allocation had a negative impact on performance. Stock picking was positive, particularly in information technology, health care, and communication services.

Adyen had a very positive move after delivering positive surprises on payments volumes and solid profitability. Cyclical were in favour by investors. CRH had record results thanks to a very strong positive pricing composition in the US. Stellantis reassured on their outlook and announced a new share buyback. Unicredit announced record-breaking levels of cash returns along with resilient net interest income expectations for 2024.

BNP Paribas disappointed investors in Q4 2023 and toned down their medium-term return ambitions. Dassault Systèmes warned of a material slowdown in their healthcare vertical, which is likely to affect their near-term growth rates. Edenred reacted negatively to an Italian investigation on their bidding practices.

Economic growth is uneven, with low growth in Europe and in China balanced by an acceleration in the US and good developments elsewhere. Falling inflation expectations reduce the risks of a Central Bank mistake. European macro surprises are now improving in our view, leading the way to a synchronized upturn. In that environment we believe that corporates will be able to grow at a moderate pace. Value and cyclical were at 45.3% and 75.4% of the fund respectively.

Since inception, ELEVA Euroland Selection is up 68.64% vs an index up 52.02%, an outperformance of 1,662 bps.
